Cabaldon, Cahill take most votes in council race

■ Cabaldon wins re-election; challenger Jim Cahill earns a spot on the city council at the expense of incumbent Mayor Wes Beers

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

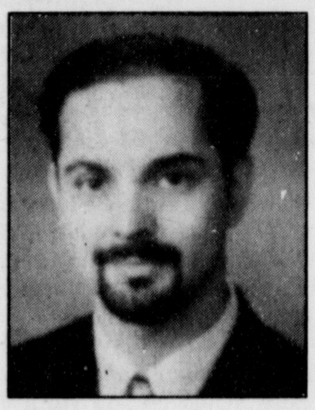
Mayor Wes Beers may have presided over his last West Sacramento City Council meeting. He missed winning a re-election bid on Nov. 3 by 3.8 percentage points, garnering 24.6 percent of the vote.

He will be replaced on the council by challenger Jim Cahill, who found his second campaign for city council to be the charm, and won 28.4 percent of the vote to earn second place in the election and a new seat on the city council. Cahill first ran for election to the council in 1996, missing by a narrow margin.

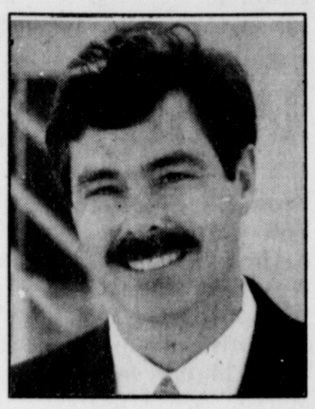
Meanwhile, city council incumbent Christopher Cabaldon took first place in last week's election and earned a four-year term, taking 31.6 percent of the vote.

Cahill's fellow challenger, Marna Miller, earned 15.2 percent. Miller, too, had run unsuccessfully in 1996.

Beers, a manager with the adoption branch of the state's social services department, has sat on the council since 1990 after two years on the city planning commission. He campaigned on his record, touting city achievements in attracting jobs and businesses and its plans for growth. He could not be reached for comment this week.



CHRISTOPHER CABALDON



JIM CAHILL

Beers did not attend the Nov. 4 city council meeting following the election. There is no meeting scheduled for this week due to the Veterans Day holiday, and the Yolo County elections office expects to certify the results of the election this week, allowing Cahill to be sworn in (and Beers to exit) before the council's next scheduled meeting on Nov. 18.

Cabaldon will add another four years to follow up on the two-year term he is now wrapping up. Cabaldon, who is vice chancellor of the state's community college system, was first elected to the council in 1996, filling the last two years of a term vacated by Roland Hensley, who resigned for health reasons. Cabaldon raised the most money in the 1998 city campaign, aggressively pushing his record on local issues.

Neither Cabaldon nor Beers could be reached for comment this week.

Cahill, a financial planner by trade, said he was preparing for his new position on the council.

"So far, all I've been doing is trying to get together with key people," he said Monday. "You can only see so much from the public side of the issues. So I'm meeting with the city manager and others to make sure I understand things correctly, and so far it seems I do."

Cahill credited hard work and an attempt to listen to members of the public with helping him earn a seat.

"I really believe the hard work paid off," Cahill commented. "I certainly walked as many precincts as I could, and most of them more than twice. I feel like I listened and focused back on what people were saying, which was that the people wanted more attention paid to them."

He added that one area he would like to modify the city's efforts is its handling of redevelopment agency monies.

WES BEERS

"I think I'd like to see a refocussing of the redevelopment efforts towards neighborhoods, and I'd like to see a shift in the efforts of the building department to be of more assistance to people improving their properties," he said.

Cahill, who campaigned against Mayor Beers (and was helped by an independent campaign from landowner Vince Frugoli, who championed the goal of replacing Beers with Cahill), had positive words for Beers after his victory.

"I feel Wes has contributed a lot to the city," he said. "I wish him the best and hope he will still be in the position of offering himself as an asset to this city."

The council's next meeting is scheduled to be a joint meeting with the Washington Unified School District school board on Nov. 18. Although the "new" composition of the city council is expected to be in place at that meeting, the new school board is not expected to be sworn in until December.

Although West Sacramento had four city council candidates vying for two seats and 11 school board candidates competing for three seats in Tuesday's ballot contest, the city had the lowest voter turnout of Yolo County's cities, and was lower too than the turnout in the county's unincorporated area. Countywide, 56.9 percent of eligible voters participated in the election, while 51.3 percent of those eligible in West Sacramento voted.

Local and state ballot results reported in last week's News-Ledger remain unchanged, with the exception that Proposition 10, the tobacco tax initiative, now shows a small margin of victory with several hundred thousand absentee ballots still to be counted.

In the county race for Yolo County sheriff/coroner, California Highway Patrol commander Ed Prieto handily defeated law enforcement investigator John Laugenour, with 56.9 percent of the vote to Laugenour's 43 percent.

Incumbents and Hocking come out ahead in trustee race

■ Incumbents Westvik and Farmer re-elected to school board; Hocking wins a short term

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The school board in the Washington Unified School District will soon sport a new look, courtesy of the resignation earlier this year of trustee Hal Williams and the election last week of new board member Ed Hocking.

The resignation of Williams broke up a longtime majority of the board involving Williams, Irene Eklund and Pat Flint, while Hocking's election brings to the board a candidate who has traded barbs with Eklund for the past year.

Hocking, a complaint investigator for the state department of alcohol and drug programs, held off a strong challenge for the two-year term made by fellow newcomer Karl Machschefes, a school teacher in Sacramento.

About Town

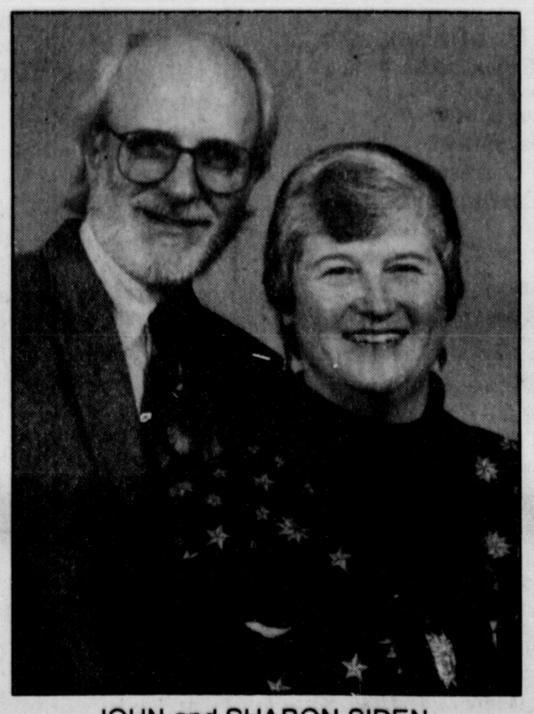
Features Editor

John Siden was raised in Southern California and married his wife, Sharon, shortly after graduating from Chapman University in Orange, where he had majored in philosophy. Then he and Sharon packed up what few worldly possessions they had and motored north and then east on the newly constructed trans-Canada highway, their destination being Rochester, New York, where John enrolled in Colgate Rochester Divinity School. For the next three years, while John studied, Sharon taught school.

"I guess it's fair to say I was somewhat of an idealistic youth," said John. "I wanted to try and make a difference if I could, and divinity school was another important step in that direction. It was a very rewarding experience."

At the age of 26, John was offered interviews at three different churches, one in Southern California, one in Idaho, and one in West Sacramento.

"Both Sharon and I really fell in love with this area," said John. "There were warm and friendly people everywhere we looked, so I decided to take the pastor's position at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Broderick. It was a small church, with only about 50 or 60 members, and we felt at home right away."



JOHN and SHARON SIDEN

Four years later John took a related ministry position at the Broderick Christian Center and served as its director for the greater part of the next decade.

"We developed a number of programs aimed at assisting troubled youths in the community," explained John. "It was done by gender and grade level and we did a little bit of everything, from counseling to summer camp. We were also able to establish a day care center, a senior citizens program, and a neighborhood health clinic that later became the Salud Clinic."

John's next professional stop was at the private, non-profit Sacramento Association for the Retarded, where he served as its Deputy Director from 1976 to 1981 and advocated for programs serving mentally retarded adults and children.

"It was kind of a natural progression in terms of the kind of work I wanted to do," said John, "and the programs were very much needed by a segment of our society which is all-too-often overlooked or forgotten about."

John also spent five years as the Executive Director of Opportunities for Handicapped, Inc., a sheltered workshop for disabled adults, and six years with Yolo County's Health Services Agency, where he assisted with much needed alcohol and drug programs. John is currently employed by the Yolo County General Services Agency.

"I've been very lucky in my professional career," said John.

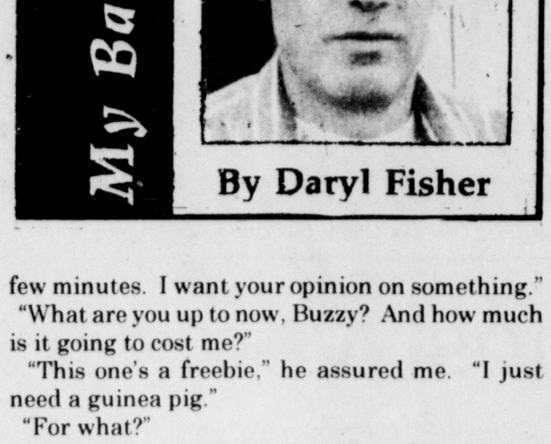
Vietnam was a good place for aspiring businessmen

Note: The following column first appeared in the News-Ledger during Veterans Day week a few years ago.



Buzzy Bradford (not his real name) didn't go to Vietnam to do any of the fighting and dying. In fact, I'm pretty sure Buzzy didn't care one way or the other who won the war. He wore an olive green uniform and walked around the compound in dusty combat boots just like everyone else, and he had even been issued a rifle because cooks had to pull perimeter guard duty now and then, but soldiering just wasn't his thing. Buzzy was a businessman.

If you needed discounted cigarettes, you went to Buzzy. If you wanted one of the young Vietnamese girls who worked in the mess hall to meet you in a hootch bunker late at night, you slipped Buzzy the going price and he set it up. If you didn't have time to go to the PX to pick up stamps and stationary, Buzzy would go for you. If you needed to get some photos processed in a hurry, Buzzy knew a Vietnamese guy who could do it for half the price in half the time. And most important of all, if you needed some grass or speed, Buzzy knew where to get the very best stuff.

Buzzy's cut was usually ten percent, and it had to be up-front. If he didn't like you, it was twenty-five percent, so everybody worked hard at keeping Buzzy happy. His fellow soldiers included him in all the pickup basketball and football games, even though he was the most uncoordinated human being I had ever met. They allowed him to read their letters because he rarely got one of his own. They let him bum smokes because they knew he was too cheap to buy his own, and they even played poker with him knowing full well he cheated at every opportunity.

"Hey, Fisher," said Buzzy late one afternoon, sticking his oversized head into my hootch, "you interested in an advanced showing?"

"Advanced showing of what?" I asked him with suspicion.

"Come on," he said, grinning like he always did when he was up to no good, "it'll only take you a few minutes. I want your opinion on something."

"What are you up to now, Buzzy? And how much is it going to cost me?"

"This one's a freebie," he assured me. "I just need a guinea pig."

"For what?"

"Questions, questions, questions. You coming or not?"

"Give me a hint."

"All you need to know is that I've really hit the jackpot this time. Now are you coming or not?"

Buzzy's gold mine turned out to be an ancient 16mm movie projector which he had purchased from one of the Vietnamese black market vendors in downtown Soc Trang. He had then written to one of his old junior college fraternity brothers and convinced him to mail off a half-dozen stag films, which had apparently arrived a few days earlier.

"Even at five bucks a head, I guarantee you tonight's premier presentation is going to be a total sellout," Buzzy said with pride as he began stringing film from a round tin can into his movie projector.

"You're going to show a stag film right here in the mess hall?" I asked him in disbelief.

"Yep, at eight sharp. I've been getting the word out for a couple of days now. It's by invitation only, if you know what I mean."

"And the mess sergeant is actually going to let you do it?" I asked.

"Sure, for a small percentage of the take of course."

"But what if the lieutenant or the first sergeant finds out?"

"I don't think they will," said Buzzy confidently, "but even if they do, I'm going to give them this great spiel about how these kind of flicks are really good for everyone's morale, and I think they just might go for it. In the meantime, I'm going to milk this baby for every penny it's worth."

It wasn't quite dark yet, so the black and white picture Buzzy threw up on one of the mess hall walls was kind of fuzzy and hard to follow, but I could clearly make out what the naked co-stars of the film were attempting to accomplish most of the time. "No sound?" I asked.

"No," said Buzzy. "I can't get it to work."

"I guess you don't really need it, do you?" I volunteered.

"Naw. What's to say? Plus I bet the guys will make plenty of noise themselves."

I sat down on a stool next to Buzzy and after we had watched all twenty minutes or so of the movie, Buzzy turned to me and asked, "So, what did you think of it?"

"I could have used some popcorn," I said, trying to be funny.

"You know," said Buzzy, always looking for another way to make a buck, "now that's not a half-bad idea. Do you know what the markup on movie house popcorn is back in the world?" I shook my head 'no'. "Something like three or four hundred percent!"

"Well, Buzzy," I said, "I will say this. That movie was definitely better than most of the ones they show us around here. How many of them did you say you have?"

"Six."

"Have you checked them all out?"

"Yep."

"Which one is the best?"

"To tell you the truth," answered Buzzy with the smile that always let him get away with murder, "they all have more or less the same climax."

The 49ers and Raiders started the NFL's second half of the season with exactly the same 6-2 record, but after two controversial calls by the officials, the results were different.

The Raiders (6-3) were robbed in their 13-10 loss to the Baltimore Ravens, when the referee ruled Donald Hollas' quarterback sneak had not broken the plane of the goal line. The instant replay, which Raiders owner Al Davis had voted against in the owners' meeting, clearly showed that it should have been ruled a score.

The Raiders settled for a field goal!

The Raiders' defense played outstanding, but couldn't score any points to help the sputtering offense. Despite the defeat, the Raiders remain one game ahead of the Seahawks, whom they host next Sunday, and two games ahead of the Chiefs. The Raiders were forced to use Hollas again last Sunday after Jeff George reinjured his groin. George will probably be out two to three weeks before he's able to play again. The Seahawks are one point favorites in Oakland! The Raiders beat the Seahawks two weeks ago, 31-18 in Seattle. Look out for the big payback! Let's wait and see if Raiders fans buy tickets to this Sunday's game and lift the TV blackout.

The 49ers (7-2) on the other hand, played it smart and held out QB Steve Young in their 25-23 win over the Carolina Panthers. Young, who was injured last week after the Packers sacked him nine times, should be healthy next week. The 49ers used their controversial call to set up a key touchdown. Trailing 16-14 in the third quarter, Detmer dropped the ball after being sacked, and it bounced into the hands of Carolina lineman Les Miller, who tried to run for a touchdown.

49ers receiver terrell Owens gave chase and took the ball out of Miller's arms and ran the other way, setting up the go-ahead TD. It was a crazy play that also needed the instant replay. Ty Detmer filled in for Young, and just about threw the game away with three interceptions and a fumble. The 49ers played awful in the first half, but Detmer ended up throwing three touchdowns to lead the 49ers to a last minute field goal by "Wide" Richey. With 30 seconds left to play, the 49ers tried to give the game back to Carolina, when Richey's kickoff ended up on the 50-yard line! The 49ers dodged a bullet when Panthers kcker John Kasey missed a game-winning 57-yard field goal attempt!

The 49ers will limp into Atlanta (7-2) next Sunday with an injured QB, no offense line and a secondary that will try and hold down Atlanta's red-hot QB, Chris Chandler. The 49ers always have problems winning in Atlanta, so look for a much closer game than the 49ers' 31-20 win at 3Com Park on Sept. 27.

Last week, I picked the Jets (-3) over the Bills, but I lost the Tampa Bay game to bring my record to 16 wins, 10 losses and one tie. (I did pick the Steelers [+3 1/2] in the Monday night game, but the News-Ledger went to press on Monday.)

In week 11, take the Seahawks, who are a one point favorite in Oakland, to dish out the big payback. Seattle 28, Oakland 13.

I also like the Detroit Lions (no line due injuries) to rebound after losing to the Eagles 10-9 last week. Detroit 31, Chicago 17.

On Monday night, the Kansas City Chiefs (4-5) are in deep trouble facing defending Super Bowl Champion Denver Broncos (9-0). Take the Chiefs to give the Broncos their first loss in a do or die game in Kansas City.

Two weeks ago, I talked about the best kept secret in football, CSUS star running back Charles Roberts. Roberts amassed 249 yards leading the Hornets to a 36-13 win at Idaho State. Roberts broke the Big Sky Conference single-season rushing record with 2,084 yards. This 5' 6" Hornet has more yards rushing this season than any other player in the nation, including the Heisman Trophy candidate in Texas, Ricky Williams!

He needs 172 yards to break the Division 1AA single season record. The Hornets' next game is Saturday at 1 p.m. at Fred Anderson field, Hornet Stadium, against Montana.

Look in the Sacramento Bee this week for the big announcement of Willie Jorrin's ESPN2 fight in West Sacramento. Promoter Don Chargin will have a 7-bout card live on Friday night at the fights on Dec. 20 in the Golden State Middle School gym. Tickets are priced at $42 and $22. In the fourth quarter, Colfax scored on a 2-point safety and again on a 7-yard run and kicked to end the scoring at 36 to 0. RC offense could only pick up 65 yards rushing and 45 yards passing. Challenge me.

Two powerful words that kids are saying to their teachers, their schools, their parents.

Surprisingly, too many kids think school is too easy. They need, and want, to be challenged.

Need convincing?

- 74% of kids say schools should pass them to the next grade only when they've learned what's expected of them.
- 75% say they'd study harder if their schools gave them tougher tests.

Kids are curious and motivated when challenged in school. Now it's our challenge to challenge them. To educate them with rigorous academic standards and high expectations. To give them the skills and knowledge they'll need to succeed in school, the workplace and everyday life.

We're talking about your kids. Or grandkids. Or kids you know. If you underestimate their desire to learn, you underestimate their future. And ours.

To make that future a bright one, we need to challenge our schools to challenge our kids. And support schools in that effort. It's easy to start. Just call for our free booklet. It's filled with information on how you can help raise academic achievement. And raise the hopes of every kid who wants to succeed.

Style change for city council

The election is over and now we try to read the tea leaves. The most interesting question we try to get the leaves to explain is just what happened in the local city council election last week.

One incumbent, Christopher Cabaldon, won re-election (and garnered the most votes) quite handily.

The other incumbent, Mayor Wes Beers, placed a not-too-close third, losing his seat to challenger Jim Cahill.

Both incumbents -- Beers and Cabaldon -- had run on pretty much the same kind of record; one of careful stewardship of civic responsibilities, and one with the overall message that West Sacramento was on the right track. Yet Cabaldon's campaign was successful and the effort by Beers was not. He alone proved vulnerable to attacks by Cahill and by Cahill's supporter, landowner Vince Frugoli.

Was Beers, as a person, rejected by the voters?

This is the obvious conclusion, but it is largely incorrect.

A big part of the truth is that while the two winners, challenger Cahill and incumbent Cabaldon, may have been fairly far apart on issues, they did have a great deal in common with their campaign styles. Both campaigned vigorously, unafraid to go on the attack and careful to speak to the "neighborhood issues" they correctly believed to be close to the hearts of the voters.

Beers generated less campaign publicity than Cahill or Cabaldon, relying on the public's memory of his years of dutiful public service to provide him with the necessary votes. His promotional brochures and materials tended to stress the city's creation of jobs and its attraction of businesses such as the Money Store headquarters. These are issues that touch local residents' lives much less than city hall thinks they do.

The result was that the two candidates who campaigned strenously, went on the attack when necessary, and concentrated on issues which struck an emotional chord both succeeded; the candidate who campaigned from a great height, failed to outline plans for change and relied too much on loyalty from the city's voters did not succeed.

In 1996, the city saw something nearly identical, as council member Cindy Tuttle ran a similar campaign and was shocked by a loss at the ballot box. In that same election, fellow incumbent Greg Potnick (a frequent ally of both Tuttle and Beers) did the same thing, failing to deal adequately with attack ads levied against him -- and barely held onto his seat against political newcomers.

This year it is Beers who is stunned, and who is sent packing after eight years of service on the council and two on the planning commission.

Cahill will have to accomplish a lot to justify his replacement of Beers on the council. Beers was certainly one of the best council members this city has had.

With an intelligent, low-key, professional style and a great deal of integrity, Beers is indeed the "bureaucrat" his opponents painted him as. But he is a "bureaucrat" with some unusual qualities; over and over he has demonstrated that he can use his knowledge of bureaucracy to make West Sacramento's city government work effectively and accomplish goals.

He is being replaced by someone with a far different style. Jim Cahill comes from the private sector (a potential asset) but is far more prone to attract controversy. Cahill was, in fact, a former appointee of Beers who served on the city's planning commission until Beers asked him to resign following a difference of opinion over Cahill's community relations style.

The challenge for Cahill will be to bring fresh ideas to the council in a manner which generates more light than heat. That's the way Beers did things.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks for election support

The election results are in, and yes to my sorrow I was less than 200 votes shy of having the opportunity to serve the people of West Sacramento on the W.U.S.D. board. I want to extend my sincere thanks to all the people who took the time to vote for me, who believed in me, and who want what is best for West Sacramento.

I still plan on serving the people, voters, and students of West Sacramento. My first action will be the continuation of my service on the Bond Task Force. This is the most pressing facilities and growth issue facing us. Without a new school bond, we will be unable to meet the needs of our children. Yet to have a school we must have trust, a plan, and fiscal responsibility. I will do my best to insure that these are included with our bond issue.

I will also continue my advocacy for our schools, our community and our children. I believe we need to make some bold changes. We need to move in a direction that we have started moving but are not there yet. We need to take the lead in education, rather than follow. Two concepts I would like the new school board to consider. The end of social promotion, and the concept of K-8 schools. I will present information in the coming months, which I hope will lead us the right direction.

Losing a leader

A few weeks ago, West Sacramento celebrated the fact that "there was a there there" in our City of West Sacramento.

After the long years during which the citizens had worked together to bring the communities of Bryte, Broderick, West Sacramento and the West Sacramento District south of the barge canal together as an unincorporated and now ten years as a City, plans are underway on a chosen site to build a city hall, consolidate city offices, have a community center and a senior center, and enhance the adjacent county library.

This civic center represents the culmination of the development of our city -- it is built on the unification of three school districts, consolidation of as many fire and sanitary districts, creation of a recreation services district, and the bringing of good, clean, soft river water to us by a community services district.

Accompany this success was the targeting and defeat of leaders along the way -- usually by tax conscious representatives of special interests. Now, once again, the consensus builder has been targeted and defeated.

May the new civic center serve as a catalyst for a future in which all the gains of the past are kept. May all those impatient for services not yet received, or concerned over processes not perfect, now work together to establish priorities that are best for the whole, united community.

The shoes of Wes Beers will be big to fill; his tact and patience as board chair were class acts.

New local leaders

Congratulations are in order for developer Doug Ose for winning California's 3rd Congressional District election to succeed 20-year veteran Vic Fazio, who has served us quite well during those two decades. No doubt Mr. Ose's real estate developing will either be handled by family and/or partner(s) or be placed on hold during his tenure in Congress.

When Mr. Ose takes office, maybe he will be more responsive than our local leaders have been over the years when it comes to questions like, "Where do our taxes go and how/to what degree do various developers benefit from local land-use decisions by our local agencies?" Put another way, how come we seldom have the money to repair sidewalks, etc. while Sacramento usually makes their repairs within two business days? (One source told me that before cityhood, Yolo County had a sidewalk repair fund, which financed repairs for West Sac's sidewalks. But since we are witnessing several new "corner curb drains," maybe such future drains will be included as more sidewalk corners are made wheelchair-accessible, thus eliminating "wheelchair puddles"...let's make "better concrete decisions!")

Local congratulations are in order to City Council newcomer-to-be Jim Cahill and "relative newcomer" Chris Cabaldon, who were (re-)elected for 4-year terms. And, yes, in just two years the other three members' seats will be up for (re-)election. A fond farewell in January, 1999 for Mayor Wes Beers and good ol' Marna Miller will be known (perhaps) as the "spoiler" as her 15% of the votes was over twice the difference between what Mayor Beers and Mayor Pro Tem Chris Cabaldon received, as the #3 and #1 vote-receivers, respectively.

I continue to argue that monthly, quarterly, and annual budget reports should be provided to public by City Council/Staff -- just like we received prior to cityhood over 11 years ago from our East Yolo Community Services District/EYCSD and its predecessor, West Sacramento Sanitary District/WSSD, giving public the periodic and cumulative reports as to where our taxes go!

Olive branch from Hocking

I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to those who supported me in this campaign, by voting for me, printing and painting signs, and all of the moral support given through the many hours spent on the telephone. Now is also the time that we as a community begin to talk to each other, our families and neighbors about the school bond we desperately need to pass. Let us not hold our children hostage to board issues, real and perceived. If there are things which are less than complimentary, in the light of day, let's bring them out, make the necessary corrections and move on with the task at hand, which is to build a new school, modernize existing schools, and give our students what they need to become the very best they can. In order to achieve this I will continue to need your support and will always make myself available to your input.

To my detractors, I will hold an olive branch and not let the past rule the future. I do not wish to continue the battle which was decided on November 3, 1998. This, however, should not be mistaken for weakness. I am determined to achieve the goals set in my campaign. I am obligated to work for the community who elected me, and the students within this district. The manner in which we conduct our business should be at the highest professional level possible. We have a responsibility as role models for the students and the community we serve. As a new member of the board it is not within my power to set the tone, only to respond to it.

To the principal and vice principal of River City High School, I will now say publicly what I have said to both of you privately on October 28, 1998. I respect the skill and dedication you have for your school and its students. I have worked with both of you on many occasions, in several arenas, and it has always been a positive experience for me. Both of you, and your staff are an outstanding asset to this community. If I may, I would also like to insert a plug for the performance of our football team during the game with Colfax. You were awesome. Their score may have been five points higher, but in my heart you won that game.

Being a board member is not about power and firing people. It's about building a new school, making the existing schools betters and creating globally competitive students. To raise the self-esteem of students and staff alike. This is my community, and these are my schools, not because I was born here, but because I choose to be here. I do not have the time or energy for vendettas. My own life experiences have taught me that hate and revenge are like a cancer, they will consume you from the inside out until there is nothing of value left. I strive for progress, not perfection. I am only human and make mistakes. When brought to my attention I will take ownership of those mistakes.

To the employees of the district, regardless of what job you perform, your input and ideas are important. I may not always agree with you, but I will always treat you with dignity and respect. We are all in this together, and we have a common goal, the education of our students. Thirty years ago in the jungles of Vietnam I learned the importance of teamwork. We all have different functions, but no one individual is more important, or better than the next, from the board president to the crossing guard.

My telephone number is in the phone book for those who want to call. I will also designate some evening or weekend "office" hours in the near future.

23.5 percent earned by Machschefes, followed by Karen L. Bishop, earning 18.6 percent; Julie Hart Martin, 18.4 percent; and J.C. Myers, 13.8 percent.

In the race for the two four-year seats, incumbents Ardeene Westvik (a retired teacher and principal) and David Farmer (a police lieutenant) easily held onto their seats, with 28.8 percent and 27.6 percent of the vote, respectively. They were followed by Daniel Clayton, 13.9 percent; Paul Zolnikov, 12 percent; Richard Drew, 10.2 percent; and Stanley Dal Butler, 7.2 percent.

Westvik said Tuesday she believes the voters would like the board to continue its course.

"I certainly thank the community for its support," she commented. "If there is any message, it's that they want the board to work together and represent the interests of the community. We need to pretty much the same things we've been doing -- trying to improve achievement and building a new high school."

Farmer expressed a similar sentiment.

"I think it is a re-confirmation of the trust the people had in me from June," he said, referring to his initial election in June to fill a vacant seat. "I can't generalize on the way the public voted, but I think the number of votes I had was an affirmation that the public wanted to see done in the schools -- our goal of providing quality education."

Hocking said the "battle was over on Nov. 3," and mentioned that about 1,600 people voted for him that day.

"That's who I owe my allegiance to," he commented. "I'm prepared to enter this term with an olive branch extended."

Aside with making peace with any political adversaries on the board, Hocking said he hopes to bring a sense of financial accountability.

"I want to look at some of the ways we've been spending our money. It's ludicrous to ask people for more money (through a school bond) if we're not going to explain how we're already spending their money."

Hocking expects to be sworn in for the Dec. 8 meeting of the school board. He will not be seated in time for the board's Nov. 18 joint meeting with the West Sacramento City Council. Hocking invited concerned citizens to call him regarding school board issues at home, 372-5488.

Other local election results remain unchanged from the way they were reported in last week's News-Ledger.

Come-as-you-get-caught affair benefits Red Cross

From American Red Cross Yolo County Chapter

It's 7 p.m. on a cold, wet, stormy Saturday night and the dam at Lake Berryessa is starting to crack.

Water levels surrounding Yolo County are rising quickly and the public is instructed to immediately evacuate to the County Fair Mall in Woodland. An emergency shelter has been set up by the American Red Cross.

What would you be doing? What would you be wearing? What would happen next?

On Saturday, Nov. 14, the public will have the opportunity to experience just such a scenario during an exciting event called "Evacuation '98," sponsored by the Yolo County Red Cross. This fifth annual event will benefit Red Cross disaster relief programs. The gala is being held at the County Fair Mall, East Street and Gibson Road, beginning at 7 p.m.

Guests are asked to imagine what they would be doing when the news is blared across the radio and television airwaves. Preparing dinner? Dressed for the opera? Caught getting ready to go out -- perhaps still in a robe and slippers? Guests can dress the part, or simply "dress up" and come to enjoy an evening with the Red Cross.

Tickets are now on sale for $25 each and include tasking of California State Fair gold medal wines, catered food by area restaurants, dancing to live music, a silent auction and costume judging...for those individuals who truly are dressed as they may be during an immediate evacuation!

Additionally, every ticket holder is eligible for the annual Red Cross holiday shopping spree drawings: a $1,000 gift certificate from the County Fair Mall to use throughout the mall, a $500 gift certificate from Gottschalks, or a $250 gift certificate from JC Penney. The drawing will occur later in the evening.

This year, students in the Woodland High School Art and Drama Departments, under the direction of Chuck Warner and Sarah Anderberg, are designing a disaster set at the mall to create the mood of the Red Cross role in a disaster. Guests will enter the mall through the staged set, then move into center court for the annual wine tasting festivities.

The Yolo County Red Cross is an organization with approximately 400 volunteers countywide. Throughout the year, the Red Cross provides disaster relief as well as educational programs to help people cope with emergency situations such as flooding.

Red Cross disaster volunteers are on call 24 hours a day to respond to local fires and other disaster. The Yolo County area averages about 30 requests for assistance each year. During the last fiscal year, the chapter spent close to $8000 on relief for families burned out of their homes.

The Yolo County Red Cross also conducted disaster relief during flooding that occurred last winter. More than $6,000 was spent locally helping individuals who were affected by the storms and rising waters. Red Cross volunteers also opened an evacuation center for several days were families who needed to temporarily relocate could eat a snack, watch television and make provisions for future lodging.

The chapter also sent disaster volunteers on national assignments this past year. Three volunteers worked in Guam following a hurricane, three went to Visalia to help with flooding, one volunteer helped in the Bay Area during mudslides, and two individuals volunteered in Minnesota due to flooding. Just this September, three volunteers have traveled to Texas to help flood victims. Also, a Yolo County mental health nurse was sent to Puerto Rico this week to assist with Hurricane Georges.

Anyone wanting to purchase tickets for Evacuation '98, to support local disaster relief, can do so by stopping by the Red Cross, 120 Court Street in Woodland, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Tickets can also be purchased by phone using Visa or MasterCard. Tickets are also being sold at the County Fair Mall office, East Street and Gibson Road; and at Kimes Ace Hardware, 35 Main Street in Winters.

The world's largest zoological reserve is Etosha National Park in Namibia. Established in 1907, it has grown to 38,427 square miles.

The Great Smoky Mountains are so named because they are usually covered by a smoky mist or haze. The 250 species of trees which cover it create a dense humid atmosphere that looks like a smoky mist on the mountaintop.

"I've really enjoyed working with like-minded people who are trying hard to make a difference in other people's lives. There's great satisfaction in trying to help those in need."

On October 27th, as part of a county-wide night of recognition, John was awarded the first annual "John Siden Community Services Award", which will be given in the future to other local citizens who, like John, have dedicated their lives to helping others. The award was presented by the Salud Clinic Advisory Board and it recognized John's more than three decades of work on behalf of the health and welfare of Yolo County residents.

Roger Clarkson, who has worked alongside John for almost a decade said, "John is one of those meticulous people who leaves no stone unturned. When he's working on a project he is always organized, thorough, and persistent. He gets things done, and I doubt very seriously if West Sacramento would have gotten the new County Services Center without all of his hard work and dedication. You definitely know you're doing something right when they name an annual community services award after you."

Phyllis Runyan, who has worked with John on a number of community projects said, "John is very quiet, but he's a real doer. He never blows his own horn, either, which is getting to be a pretty rare quality these days. The important thing with John is to get things done, not to take credit for it. He is a very valuable member of this community and has been for a long time." "John has been a wonderful president of the Friends of the Library," said Margaret Crawford, who has been a hard-working member of that organization for many years. "He has always been an advocate for education and he knows that reading is very important to learning. He wants West Sacramento to have the very best library possible, and his organizational and leadership skills are much appreciated by 'The Friends'."

Linda Brooks, who served on the Washington Unified School Board of Trustees with John for many years said, "John has a set of values he stays true to, and when he was on the school board, he always tried very hard to do what was right. He's a natural consensus maker and his willingness to listen to both sides of an issue has a calming effect on others. Believe me, it's very easy to say nice things about John Siden, and West Sacramento is a much better place because of him."

John and Sharon have two children, Scot and Katie, who are both graduates of Sacramento State University. Scott works in special events planning and Katie is a physical therapist currently living in Louisiana. Sharon, who continues to find teaching very rewarding, is a math specialist at Elkhorn Elementary School.

In their spare time, John and Sharon enjoy good music, traveling (they've been to Ireland twice), home improvement projects, and the company of their first grandson, Kyle.

Local twins return to the place they began

From Sutter Community Hospitals of Sacramento

Three-year-old West Sacramento twins Tyrae and Andre Bailey have a very "special" place to go every year. A place with plenty of ice cream, balloon-twisting clowns, and bubble wands waiting in a pool of bubble mix. And a place where, they fought for life, and won.

That place is Sutter Memorial Hospital and its Special Care Nursery annual reunion.

The Bailey's were among the 700 guests who came from throughout Northern California to attend the reunion on September 16.

"The nurses were so wonderful we thought it'd be nice to see them again," said the twins' mother, Teresa Chamorro-Bailey. "They made me feel so comfortable knowing they could take care of such tiny babies."

Tyrae was born weighing a mere two pounds, 12 ounces, while Andre was born weighing only three pounds, three ounces. The pair stayed in the special care nursery for one month.

Each year, Sutter Memorial Hospital celebrates the gift of life by reuniting children with the staff who lovingly cared for them. These children spent the first days, weeks or months of their lives in the Special Care Nursery, which is the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit.

Face painting, balloons, special t-shirts, and plenty of refreshments punctuate the festivities each year, but the biggest excitement comes from the smiles that light up every face.

And it's not unusual to see smiles beaming on identical faces -- twins and triplets are plentiful at each year's reunion.

"I'm convinced that we have a better time than the kids do," said Wendy Stover, assistant nurse manager of the Sutter Special Care Nursery. "We love to renew relationships with the parents and see their children grow bigger and taller -- we always look forward to this day."

Each year, more than 1,000 children from throughout Northern California receive vital, specialized care at the neonatal intensive care unit at Sutter. The staff cares for children facing challenges that range from extremely low birth weight to heart defects and including a broad range of other complications.

During Sutter Memorial's annual Special Care Nursery celebration, the challenge is for parents to keep up with their active happy and stimulated children.

"The reunion has been great fun," said Chamorro-Bailey. "We're enjoying seeing the other children as well."

We salute you because you unselfishly answered your country's call to make certain that world freedom and the American way of life would remain strong.

We salute you because even in peacetime you continue to serve your country - to fill a lifelong need to serve which you share with veterans everywhere. Many of you continue to serve through service to your community as members of The American Legion.

We must remember your sacrifices today and everyday.

Nursing scholarship winner —

The Supreme Cootiette Club of the US and the Supreme M.O.L. awarded their nursing scholarships, $1,500 and $1,000, to West Sacramento native Diane Haugen, at their National Convention in Reno, NV on August 15/.

Diane attended James Marshall and grated from River City high School and is currently enrolled in her third semester as a nursing student at American River College. Diane and her husband, Randy, and two sons, Gavin and Carson, reside in West Sacramento.

Diane was proudly sponsored by the local Cootiette Club, Gold Nugget #1, and the local M.O.L. Hut #4.

City celebrates recycling day

"America Recycles Day" is a national awareness day that celebrates the success of recycling programs throughout the country. West Sacramento will join thousands of other communities in celebrating by hosting a local event on Saturday, Nov. 14 at NAPA Auto Parts, 725 Harbor Blvd., from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. "Part of the message of recycling is to purchase products made from recycled material," said recycling coordinator Denise Kotko. "We have an opportunity with NAPA Auto Parts to promote the purchase and use of re-refined oil. We will also have on hand many products that can be purchased in West Sacramento that are made from recycled material." Through this event the recycling division is helping to raise awareness of all aspects of recycling -- from collection to processing to completing the loop through the purchase of recycled products.

West Sacramento residents can participate in America Recycles Day by joining the recycling division at NAPA Auto Parts to learn about re-refined oil and to make a pledge to "buy recycled."

Those who pledge will be entered into prize drawings and have a chance to win the American Green Dream House, a new home built with recycled content materials, and other prizes.

Veterans memorial dedication —

The Yolo county Veterans Coalition will officially dedicate the Yolo County Veterans Memorial on November 11 at 11 a.m. The ceremony will take place in Woodland at Monument Hill Memorial Park, located at 35036 County Road 22.

The dedication of the Memorial on Veterans Day, November 11, 1998, also marks the 80th anniversary of the World War I armistice. Robert Plots, chairman of the Yolo County Veterans Coalition, spoke of the significance of the dedication ceremony. "This ceremony will provide all Yolo County veterans and their supporters a unique opportunity to focus attention on the service and sacrifice of those who answered their country's call to duty in both wartime and peacetime service in the armed forces," Plots said.

"This is out day to honor those who served in the armed forces of the United States and our nation's guardians who protect and defend the sacred traditions entrusted to us by our Constitution. To paraphrase Winston Churchill: Never has so much been owed, by so many, to so few," Plots said.

The Veterans Memorial is aesthetically unique and consists of a small plaza and walkway located in the center of the Veterans Section of Monument Hill that provides access to the Monument. Four benches are set along the inside of the plaza, and the plaza is outline by three flagpoles upon which the National, State and POW/MIA flags are flown. In the center of the plaza, the focal point of the memorial, stands a seven-foot, six-sided solid black granite monument topped by a bronze American Eagle. Five 18-inch bronze service seals of the Army, Air Force, Coast Guard, Marine Corps, Navy and a memorial plaque are mounted on the monument's surface.

The Yolo County Veterans Coalition, composed of representatives of county veteran's organizations, will host this year's activities at Monument Hill Memorial Park.
